Comments

On behalf of Wanuskewin, I would like to commend the planning team on their inclusive approach to the revised Official Community Plan. The cyclical and living nature of this document is encouraging, and it demonstrates the City of Saskatoon's commitment to evolve as the cultural and natural environment requires. In particular, the Wanuskewin team was encouraged that Indigenous stories of our territory were centred in the document, and that the history of Opimihaw Creek and Wanuskewin is formally recognized. As Wanuskewin continues to work toward UNESCO World Heritage designation, inclusion in the planning framework of the City will be increasingly important. We are particularly happy to read that "the City is dedicated to the conservation and success of the park as an important historical, cultural and educational space" (17).
