Dear City council:

"It's a very ambitious project," Esterby said of the $42.7-million development. "We've been preparing for it and building our capacity to be ready for this for many years. [It's] essentially building a neighborhood rather than just a bunch of houses everywhere."

At $42.7 million you could buy 142 houses at $300,000 each and have an asset that had value. Camponi Housing is be dooped by a developer into building what will eventually become a ghetto in the future(these projects always start out good but eventually fall apart). This amounts to segregation. I thought that battle was overcome in the 1960's. The people who live here would be better off with individual home ownership. Something to be proud of. They should try it , they may like it.
