There is absolutely ZERO evidence for the continuation of the abhorrent civic policy to force city employees and users of city services to wear masks.

Given the assumed size of virus particles and the vastly greater size difference in filtration of the masks themselves, wearing one is akin to putting up a chain-link fence to stop mosquitoes from bothering you in your backyard.

By all means we should be protecting people who are at risk, but this is a risk that should solely be borne by those who feel at risk, not everyone else in all situations. It's absurd to think that in U.S. states such as Florida, Texas, South Dakota and other jurisdictions around the world, people have been unfettered with masks for nearly two years and the hospitalization rates are actually lower than they are here.

End this punitive policy and allow city residents to smile again and embrace the fresh air, not live in constant fear of perfectly healthy individuals.
