Comments:

I think building a Freeway through the swales is a horrible idea environmentally, mental health wise, and financially.

There are a lot of other places that the government would be able to use these funds for other than an unneeded Freeway, which would save at max a few hours for the lives of so many keystone species of wildlife and plants. These funds would make a monumentally massive difference if given to the education funds which are needed way more than another pavement going through the last of the natural lands available. I hope you really consider the long term effects of these changes on the lives of people around and the lives of the natural world around.
