Dear Mayor and Member of City Council,

Thank you for your work in the pandemic so far. I know it has not been I strongly disagree with any mandate for covid vaccination. Bodily autonomy and informed consent are vital facets and mandating a medical procedure goes against and violates citizens' rights. Vaccinating people does not protect against COVID-19. The CDC has advised that fully vaccinated people can become infected with COVID-19 and still transmit to others (<https://www.cdc.gov/coronavirus/2019-ncov/vaccines/fully-vaccinated-guidance.html>).

As a scientist and engineer, I think the current policy is not evidence based, not scientific, but controversy. If vaccine has been proved to be effective, then masks should not be mandatory indoors. If vaccine is not effective, why does the government strongly require vaccination? Even if the vaccine has been proved to be effective, the vaccine can only protect the one vaccinated from severe symptoms but can not prevent the spreading of the virus, in this case, it would be more dangerous for people who have vaccinated to spread the virus as they might have no symptoms. In addition, mandate for covid vaccination is against our Chart of Rights and the Law of our Mighty God, our creator and King of kings.

Instead of forcing vaccinations on people, I invite you to dialogue with the people. Why are they hesitant? What factors can be changed? Increasing vaccination rates has not decreased COVID-19 infections in countries like Israel. It is time to dialogue and review multi-faceted solutions. I sincerely hope you protect the freedom of the people in Saskatoon.

Following is my detailed religious conviction:

I believe that the Triune God who revealed Himself in His dealing with the people of Israel, and then most particularly in the coming of the Son of God, Jesus the Messiah, and today in the ministry of the Holy Spirit in His Church, made mankind in His image, and gave to man dominion over the world as His steward and representative. In opposition to the assertions of secularism, we assert that man's life has transcendent value because of this act of special creation on the part of God. God's law, therefore, is the highest standard by which man, God's creature, is called to live and abide.

For this reason I condemn as a blatant act of rebellion and murder the destruction of the lives of unique pre-born humans in the womb. The plague of abortion brings God's judgment upon any nation or people who would place their self-claimed sexual liberty above that of the value of human life as God has proclaimed and defined it. Obedience to the commandment to preserve life is multi-faceted and provides a broad and deep understanding of how Christians are to seek to honor God by honoring life itself.

I also assert that while we are to preserve life, I am to do so in accordance with God's will. God's law provides for freedom, for liberty of conscience, and these realities are to be exercised by mankind in light of God's revealed will that man is to live for His glory always recognizing his own mortality and the briefness of life. We are not to live in constant fear of death, and indeed it is for this reason that the gospel removes our dread of death and gives to us life eternal. Christians therefore proclaim Christ's Lordship over all realms, for, as He claimed, all authority has been given to Him in heaven and upon earth (Matthew 28:18). In light of His Kingship, I assert that men and women have the right to refuse mandatory medical procedures, actions, medications, or injections, whether these actions are ordered by the highest government authorities, or lesser authorities, such as an employer or local magistrate. They may do so when they are convinced that these medical procedures could threaten their life, their future health, their future fertility, and their wellbeing. Further, parents have the right and responsibility to make said decisions for their children as well, without external interference. I believe and assert that a Christian's conscience can properly and validly submit to medical procedures, such as in the taking of tested and proven medications and vaccines, giving thanks to God whose ordering of His creation has allowed such wondrous advancements. At the same time, I believe and assert that many sound bases may exist for a Christian to refuse similar treatments, such as when they lack long-term safety information, have deleterious and dangerous side-effects, possible unknown impacts upon pre-existing medical conditions, and originate from fetal stem cell lines via abortion. Likewise, one may be convinced that the demanded procedure arises not from a public health concern, but from political machinations and activities that are opposed to God's truth and ways, and hence are to be resisted. I assert that the conscience cannot be coerced, and that all such attempts to do so are in opposition to divine truth.

Therefore, I assert in the name and authority of our Lord Jesus Christ that I have the right and the responsibility to research fully the issues relevant to all such medical matters; that free flow of information must be guaranteed and protected; and that I have the right to refuse such experimentation and mandatory procedures, including vaccination, upon sound religious grounds. I likewise call upon all governmental agencies, businesses, schools, employers of all types, to respect these deeply held religious conclusions and convictions, and to honor the religious liberty according to the Chart of right.
