Comments:

Please reconsider not removing the parking minimum requirements for residential dwellings.

I feel the public is not being heard as a majority of the public were in opposition of allowing multi unit dwellings in all residential areas yet the city approved it anyway.

I am horrified that total ignorance as to the reason these bylaws were put into place - for the betterment of the residents of Saskatoon. City council is motivated by money and not the people who live here.

Please listen and do not change the parking bylaws that currently exist to ensure that our streets don't become overcrowded (see the university for example when not enough parking on site is available). We do not need this on every residential street.

City council is making a terrible, hasty, monetarily motivated mistake.
