Hello, i just wanted to give my thought once again on the 100 block of ninth street closure.

First how do you do an accurate traffic study on a street in 2014 and 2018 when the other alternative route to downtown has been out of commission for many yrs (vic bridge). This study is highly flawed and should not be taken as accurate info.

People buy a house on a busy street then complain about traffic and get the city to think about changing the street, which if this happens will greatly effect the whole neighborhood.

Just a suggestion, could you not put one or two large speed bumps on ninth street to try and reduce traffic. I believe that the stop signs on ninth and Mcpherson help reduce the speeds and we were very happy to see that as the intersection was very dangerous for many yrs. I was involved in a totaled off accident at that intersection.

Hopefully the opening of the new bridge will help the traffic problem on ninth, but closure should not be considered

You may think that I am not familiar with the street I lived at [redacted] ninth street from 1972(8 yrs old) till 1985, then purchased my house at [redacted] main st and am still in this house 1972 till 2018 (46 yrs) using the alley that comes out onto 100 ninth.

Thank you
